What questions do you have about this week's message?

Rob suggested that right, restore, and reconciled relationship matter more than anything to God. Do you think he is right? How do obedience and right relationship fit together?

Why does the _____ (fill in the blank: you, me, DBIC, the American Church, etc.) door so poorly in seeking that which is lost?

Rob suggested that our desire to be wanted is one of our deepest longings. Do you agree? What sins are related to either not understanding that or having that need not met?

How would having a solid, unwavering sense that God wants you change your life?

What would it take for you to go to the "next level" of knowing that God wants you?

What might make it hard?

How could other Christians help in this process?

If you (we) don't know of or have stories of the lost becoming found personally to REJOICE over, it would be good this week to read some stories what God is doing in the world or listen to a friend share about how they came to Christ.
